The Senior Address: From the Perspective of Mary

By Grace Coughlin

A beautiful sunny day, not too hot or humid, the perfect day to eat lunch on the front lawn. I glance up at the Mary statue. She's missing a finger but you could never tell that from her expression, a face full of love. It's nice to think she's been watching over us, and if she could speak, she could tell us all about our 4 years here.

She witnessed the first day of school every year. Parents push freshmen out of their car to high five teachers. Mortified faces, beet red from embarrassment, but somehow less tense by the time they get to the door.

She witnessed students flood into the front circle every day at 12:45, a rush to get to Keller dining hall. She waits, as one or two people come back late to class armed with the excuse that they had composting duty. She must look fondly on sorting through the compost, trash, recycling, and upcycling. It helps us foster the Academy Alum value of nurturer, a value she herself exemplifies.

She witnessed every day at 3:00, when we walked to our carpools or got picked up right in front of her. Our backpacks filled with books and heads filled with new knowledge. Every day the same routine but never the same day twice.

She witnessed the white building, long ago condemned, come down, and a new green space where it stood. Every renovation to the East building she could see out of the corner of her eye. She watched as people streamed into the new Theater to see the opening night of whatever play or musical was being showcased. She never got to see inside but I'm sure she would have loved it. After all, she saw how late the nights went in preparation.

She watched as we lugged sports gear up the stairs and out from the cubbies underneath the Central building. Then made sure to listen as we cheered on our fellow classmates to V.I.C.T.O.R.Y. across the street and wherever the sport took us.

She watched as we stood in protest, terrified of what gun violence means for us. She stood strong as people our own age across the country were forced to grow up too quickly, to stand for those who no longer could. To say the years we spent in high school were not a polarizing time for many people would be a lie. So like her, we chose to stand with our arms outstretched. We chose to embrace one another.

One day a year she watches, at 7:30 am, as we cheer and chant our faces covered in paint and cars decked out in red, white, and blue. I'm sure she cringed as we screeched the words to "Party in the USA" laughing and singing together, finally seniors. She saw our contemplative faces as we came back from Kairos, a tradition we keep close to our hearts. Taking pictures next to her, she observed us, maybe not so different on the outside but different in the way we see one another. To think we were once small, scared, freshmen is laughable now considering the strong, independent women we've become.

We celebrate her motherly nature not just at May Crowning but every day. How could we not? She sits there watching over us, rain or shine. As I look back I can still see that face full of love, but now it's bittersweet as she watches the girls she's seen grow from freshman to senior year leave for a new place, a new school, and maybe a new town. I wish I could bring her with me, that charming nine-fingered statue. But she's needed here to look after the next group of girls. It's nice to think she is now their silent witness. We will always have her in our memories and keep her spirit alive in the friendships we made from our time here at SUA.
